- The website should communicate: 'I am an experienced and recognized health insurance advisor who helps customers understand their options.'
- It should NOT communicate: 'I guarantee that you will get the best insurance, guaranteed claims and guaranteed benefits.'

- Do not invent achievements, numbers, awards, certifications, customer statistics, testimonials, locations, company relationships, insurance benefits or claim guarantees.

- Prioritize trust, transparency, professionalism, readability, SEO, mobile responsiveness and conversion over aggressive sales tactics.

Implementation note: All claims, branding, promotional language, logos, product descriptions and disclosures should be reviewed against the applicable insurer's current requirements and applicable insurance advertising/regulatory requirements before the website goes live.
